EXTRA INDICTED!

Five Brooklyn Supervisors Charged with Defrauding the County.

MR. QUINTARD'S BIG BOMB.

Result of the Gigantic Fraud Unearthed by "The World."

Ex-Supervisor Quintard's thrilling exposure of a gigantic conspiracy against the county treasury, as published exclusively in The World, together with other revelations of an equally startling character, has terminated in a batch of indictments being found by the Grand Jury to-day.

Quintard in a lengthy document alleged that Supervising Architect Eastman had combined with several supervisors to pass bills which were largely in excess of the proper amount to be paid for plans for county buildings.

The surplus amount, Mr. Quintard alleged, was to be divided among the conspirators.

Other similar schemes were on foot by which those in the ring were to have received generous sums for their services, according to Mr. Quintard, and when The World published his statement confirmation related in Brooklyn political circles.

Following up the story, The World unrolled the gigantic conspiracy and pinned it to the bottom.

When the Grand Jury met, it was expected that indictments would be found against the conspirators.

Quintard, however, in the storm broke and indignantly refused to be implicated in the plot.

George F. O'Brien, supervisor from the Sixth Ward, now serving his third term, Democrat.

Charles M. Nolan, ex-supervisor from the Ninth Ward, Democrat.

John E. French, ex-supervisor from the Twelfth Ward, Democrat.

Robert O'Donnell, supervisor from the Twelfth Ward, Republican.

It was rumored that Supervisor William Watson, Republican, from the Twenty-fourth Ward, was also indicted, but this was not ascertained.

Archibald Eastman's name was not included among the indicted as far as can be learned, but it is expected that he will not go entirely free.

POLICEMAN KEEVAN LIVES.

Commerford's Knife Stabs Not Likely to Prove Fatal.

Policeman John Keegan, of the Congress street station, Brooklyn, is at the Long Island College Hospital suffering from three knife wounds in the right side and another in the head, inflicted by John Commerford, twenty-four years old, a resident of the Smoky Hill Gang, which killed Policeman Stone a few years ago.

Commerford was arrested by Justice Tilden in the Police Court this forenoon and held for trial.

Commerford was indicted for the murder of the late Policeman Stone, yesterday, and when Keegan attempted to arrest him, drew a knife and stabbed the policeman.

Keegan held Commerford until Policemen Dooley and Casey arrived and took him in charge.

His wounds are not dangerous.

GUNNER'S REVOLT APPROVED.

Failure of the Effort to Discipline the Twenty-Second's Leader.

The opponents of John A. Gunner, the leader of the Republican organization of the Twenty-second Assembly District, chose a very inopportune time to attack him last night.

It was at the regular monthly meeting of the organization at its headquarters, 1328 Third Avenue.

Gunner had opposed Tom Platt in his bid for the nomination for Governor, and the brazen effort to support it with their votes.

Mr. Gunner's course was fully endorsed.

THE EVENING WORLD.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1890.

SAUCY J. WARD. TAULBEE SHOT

He Throws Lawyer Duysters's Dictum Back in His Teeth.

LAW POINTS AND BASEBALL.

The Buffalo Players' Transfer Story Is Locally Denied.

Since the injection of the element of law into the baseball war between the Players' League and National League, the stars of the diamond are gradually qualifying for the woodcock, and discussion of the legal aspect of the contest has been the order of the day.

The bringing of the suit against Capt. Buck Ewing in the United States Court, instead of the Supreme Court, has created a great deal of exciting debate.

Shortstop John M. Ward said this morning: "I said in an interview that I believed the League's reason for bringing this case of Ewing's in the United States Court was because the League had already been practically beaten in the New York Supreme Court."

Mr. Duysters, the New York City's attorney, criticizes this statement and declares that "the veriest tyro in law would know that it is not the case."

Possibly the veriest tyro would know it, but I don't think any first-class lawyer would sustain him. The fact that Ewing was in this city when he was personally served with the process of the United States Court conclusively shows that the summons of the New York Supreme Court could have been served upon him within the State at the same time, and if such a citizen of another State the right, at his own option, and solely for his own protection, to remove such a case into the United States Court, but it is not at all likely that Ewing would have done this, as the New York Court had already decided in his case upon the meaning of the contract in question.

Taulbee was looking for him. The two men met on the inner stairway of the House wing.

Taulbee struck at Kincaid and then attempted to pull his nose. Kincaid quickly whipped out his revolver and shot the ex-Congressman in the left eye.

The wound is not necessarily fatal, but Taulbee will certainly lose the sight of one eye.

The wounded man was carried from the stairway, where he fell, into a committee room, where he was attended by Congressman Yoder, who is a physician.

He was afterwards removed to his home. Kincaid promptly surrendered himself, and was taken to Police Headquarters.

He was very cool, and simply stated that he had shot Taulbee in self-defense.

Kincaid, who is about forty-five years old, comes of one of the best-known Kentucky families.

His grandfather was once Governor of the State, and Kincaid had had several positions under the Government, among them that of Commissioner to the Paris Exposition of 1876.

He represents the Louisville Times here and has contributed to several magazines.

Taulbee is thirty-nine years old and represented the Tenth Kentucky District in the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Congresses.

He escaped while in the House were the subject of general gossip in Washington.

He has been in the Kentucky mountains, and wears the slouch hat of the Kentucky mountaineer.

STEWART'S GOLDEN VINTAGE.

Contents of the Late Millionaire's Cellar to Be Sold at Auction.

The sale of the wine-cellar of the late A. T. Stewart, which comes off next Wednesday afternoon, will cause the mouths of connoisseurs in choice wines to water.

There are thousands of dozens of bottles of exquisite Malaga, sherry, Johannisberg, and other choice wines, some of which are valued at $30,000, and it was the desire of the late millionaire to purchase the whole cellar, but some difficulty arose, and it was decided to sell the wines at auction.

The wines are valued at $30,000, and it was the desire of the late millionaire to purchase the whole cellar, but some difficulty arose, and it was decided to sell the wines at auction.

All the facts in the Stewart case will be laid in the hands of the public, but in all the collections there are fine examples, and those who have seen it will easily discriminate the precious from the gross.

It is a pity that the late millionaire should have carried out his desire of purchasing the whole cellar, and that the public should have to see the contents of the cellar.

Judge Hilton, in a tongue levelled address to the public, said that the late millionaire was a man of great taste and refinement, and that his collection of wines was one of the finest in the world.

They were also greatly aided by their French butlers.

BESTIR YOURSELF, COMMISSIONER, OR THERE'LL BE TROUBLE.

100 ROUNDS AND A DRAW. DEATH WAS IN THE FLOODS.

Tame Fighting by Danny Needham and Patsy Kerrigan.

Lives Lost and Property Destroyed Through Western Storms.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—The fight between Danny Needham, of St. Paul, and Patsy Kerrigan, of Boston, at the California Athletic Club last night was declared a draw, and the purse of $1,500 was divided after one hundred tireless rounds, in the majority of which nothing was done.

The fight began at 8:35 o'clock, and ended two hours after midnight. The men appeared to be in a fine condition, but fought with such caution that the spectators began jeering at them long before the wearisome fight was over.

Needham was seconded by Billy Murphy and Prof. Anderson; Kerrigan, by the Marine and Frank Glover. Hiram Cook, of course, was referee.

Kerrigan weighed 141 pounds, Needham 130.

It was not until the seventh round that a good, clean blow was struck, and then Needham got in a neat one on Kerrigan's jaw.

Up to that time there had been a mixed exhibition of clever ducking, wild and resolute swings and rushes and feints, with only a bit of effective jabbing in the fourth, when Needham rushed Kerrigan to the ropes and got a bit of punishment in return.

In the thirteenth round, Needham again got Patsy to the ropes, but the Bostonian then made a clever rush, landed with his right, tripped his man and sent him down.

In the seventeenth round the crowd began to hiss at the poor showing, and Kerrigan, who was getting tired, punned for the contest round, and spectators expressed their impatience by loud jeering at the men.

Needham forced Patsy again in the twenty-first, and though there was not much hard hitting, Kerrigan won some applause by his clever ducking.

Taulbee was thirty-nine years old and represented the Tenth Kentucky District in the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Congresses.

He escaped while in the House were the subject of general gossip in Washington.

He has been in the Kentucky mountains, and wears the slouch hat of the Kentucky mountaineer.
